

Roadmap to Spiritual Awakening. . .

Lecture: Base Chakra Confusion: Red vs. Black

Questions:

Q1. Why does the vast majority of New Age literature ascribe the colour Red to the Base Chakra?

Q2. When a person sees as a clairvoyant and says the chakras are a particular colour, what is that person actually seeing?

Q3. What is the colour of the Pelvic Chakra (Svadhishana)?

Q4. If you are not a recent arrival from a world of much higher vibration, what are the implications for your spiritual journey?

Q5. What can the devotee use to ensure that his reality stays within the realm of truth?

Answers:

A1. One reason is that incarnations from worlds that have higher vibrations than Earth come with higher overall physical body vibrations, hence their base chakra works with the next higher range of light frequencies. From their perspective the Base Chakra is above the black light frequency ranges. The other reason is that traditional Hindu texts have been poorly translated resulting in widespread misinformation. Because these sources have an air of authority on the subject of chakras, and in the absence of better information, they are taken seriously. To aggravate the problem, most sources on the internet contribute to the proliferation of this misinformation by merely parroting what others are saying.

A2. The colours that are seen by the clairvoyant around and within the chakra are the light frequencies that are passing into and through the chakra.

A3. As with any chakra, the colour of the Pelvic Chakra is determined by the light frequencies that are flowing into and through that chakra.

A4. The implication is that the traditional need to open the base chakra, to walk the spiritual journey, and to achieve enlightenment follow the same route as has always been.

A5. Discernment! Discernment! Discernment!
